Staying Safe

What is Staying Safe?

The Staying Safe program works alongside individuals and families to reduce family abuse and improve the safety of women and children. Its goal is to provide healing and support to address the impacts of transgenerational cycles of family abuse in the community.

The Program will:

- Support families and individuals experiencing, or at risk of, family abuse with the education and tools needed to identify risks
- Work with families and individuals to reduce physical and psychological abuse
- Increase awareness of the effects of neglect and trauma on children through exposure to family abuse.

How do I apply for the program?

To be eligible and apply for the program, individuals or families must meet all of the following criteria:

- Be Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander or have Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander children
- Experiencing, or previously experienced, family abuse in the home
- Be at risk of, or have had children removed as a result of family abuse.
